

ABSTRACT

Modest levels of arsenicals in drinking water (roughly 25-<75  $\mu\text{g/L}$  or ppb) are associated with significant reductions of specified and/or total cancers in men and women and of heart disease in men.